a woman inclined to drink, I think I'd take a drink." Expectations of a will fight were based on a previous gift of Sexton to Mrs. Kirk. While a patient he gave her a check for $100,000 and told her to build a new rest home.

But his niece heard of it and had payment stopped on grounds the crusty old oilman was incompetent. They had him moved to a rest home in Jacksonville, Texas, where he died.

Sexton typed the will himself and took it to Mrs. Richardson's cafe, where he got two coffee-drinkers to witness it. One has died since then.

Tells No One The will started: "This is my last will and testament. I have just had a check over by Dr. Smyth and he says I am in good shape in mind and body. I am revoking all other wills I have made. I am not going to tell anybody I have made this will so they won't ask me to change it."

"I have given all that I am going to my family. Anything they get from me from now on will not be with either my consent or my knowledge. The more I give them the more they want. Even sued me."

When Sexton, who often haggled over the price of a plug of tobacco, first came to Cleburne about 25 years ago he owned interest in 378 East Texas oil wells with three brothers—now dead.

Mrs. Richardson said once when she asked her to figure his oil royalties for a year she ran out of paper. "The sum was so huge neither myself nor Mr. Sexton could read it."

Builds Mansion He also owned two ranches totaling 9000 acres and bought $50,000 worth of war and savings bonds every six months.

Ten years ago, he became engaged to be married and built a mansion on one of his ranches. He took his fiancée to see it and they got into an argument over the furnishings.

He broke the engagement and never lived in the mansion. It burned in 1952.

Orders Hearing On Patterson

(Continued from Page One) this department, which has been seeking the Pattersons since last August, welcomes a court-authorized search for the couple.

"We will co-operate fully with Attorney Long in his efforts to find the Pattersons," Sheriff Hicks said.

Capt. Frank Manning of the Sheriff's Department was expected to make available to Mr. Long the department's records in the case. Attorney Long said he will seek an early conference with the sheriff's investigators, and will discuss the case with other law enforcement agencies and individuals.

"An effort will be made to find the Pattersons, and it will not be 'merely passive,'" Mr. Long said. He added that if necessary he will, with the court's approval, subpoena witnesses and records.

Appointment of a legal representative of the missing couple is required as part of the receivership proceedings to preserve the estate for the Pattersons and their probable heirs.

See Cancer Cells Giving Immunity

By Scripps-Howard Newspapers LOS ANGELES, March 11.—Dying cancer cells can make the body immunize itself against further invasion from this disease, a Chicago researcher reported here today.

Dr. Alfred A. Strauss told the International College of Surgeons, meeting in annual session, that he has actually produced this phenomenon in animals.

He also believes some humans dying of cancer have recovered as a result of self-immunity which they were induced to generate. But he emphasized he can't prove this as yet.

Most of the work along this line which Dr. Strauss and his colleagues at Chicago's Michael Reese Hospital have done has involved rabbits and rats.
